AELITA PRODUCTION Brings Anton Vdovichenko's Dance Performance "And All This Nonsense Too" to Kaluga

On October 10, 2026, the Dom Arkhitektora (House of the Architect, Kaluga, Lenin St. 116, 2nd floor) hosts a touring performance of "And All This Nonsense Too" — a solo work by Saint Petersburg choreographer Anton Vdovichenko, head of the performative-arts studio SDVIG. Start at 18:00, open seating, 45 seats. 18+. The performance is followed by a discussion with Anton Vdovichenko — a chance to ask the author questions and talk about what you have seen.

ABOUT THE PERFORMANCE

A suit as a symbol of normativity. A suit as an arthropod's shell. A suit as geometry, as something that gives rise to lines that don't exist in nature.

Thirty minutes of stage time — a collage of images, thoughts and dance techniques: familiar human postures twist, and through them a non-human logic shows through — the logic of form, the logic of nerves, the logic of breathing, the logic of the subconscious. A step toward the everyday, two steps aside and back — in the same tempo as the audience, and at once in another temporality, as if waking up inside Kafka's "Metamorphosis".

The author describes his interest as "movement that never fully forms" — what slips past aesthetic control and even past self-preservation: "The leg gains a consciousness of its own, separate from the head. Reflexes are not held back by cultured behaviour."

The performance premiered at the MOÑ theatre venue (Kazan) as part of an evening of contemporary choreography.

ABOUT THE CHOREOGRAPHER

Anton Vdovichenko is a choreographer, performer and teacher. In 2011 he graduated from a theatre institute (studio of Lev Erenburg), specialising in Drama and Film Acting. Since 2014 he has led the project "TechnoLaboratory" — a group creating work at the intersection of dance and performance; the group's work has been shown at Saint Petersburg venues including Skorokhod, KvartaRiata, Manege, MISP, the General Staff Building of the Hermitage, and others. Since 2017 he has run the performative-arts studio SDVIG (sdvig.space). He has collaborated with Sasha Konnikova, Anna Anderegg, Sasha Portyannikova, Anya Kravchenko, Natalia Pershina-Yakimanskaya, Emily Newman, and the AKHE Engineering Theatre. He lives and works in Saint Petersburg.
